Hello Darlings,

I hope you enjoy our campy cover. Gracious was a kitten to work with, contrary to our tigress photo copy. Also an unusual one to be sure, she is an original even tho' she can portray others.

So, when Tina Alameda, our art director, told me that she was going to run the contact sheets, as is, for the "Pageants Past" photo layout, I thought she was nuts. But as you see that "thing" has an unerring sense of what to do with a photo. They truly form a pastiche of images and feelings that so well express another period of time. She insists on delving into our files for these relics. I hope that you readers aren't bored with this use of older material.

Also many thanks to Allyn Verano for the magnificent piece . Here is original thinking at its best and in an easily digestible form. More of this kind of stuff, please!

*Love,
Kim Christy*

Pageants Past

A loving look at long ago. These contact sheets are a document of a time when belief was suspended for a night, and was replaced with magic.

Here is a candid look at all the primping and preparation that goes into a big dress-up night.

As usual, it's a toss-up for glamour between the contestants and the audience. And all the while the men sit and wait, props and settings for fabulous jewels.

And the show is underway! All the tension of the day has been leading to this exciting climax.

Dear Kim,

Congratulations as always on the latest issue of FMI. Your inspirational messages, features, and photo-essays get better and better. And the magazine looks great!

I'm the feminized male ("Karla," remember?) you were kind enough to include on the Letters page in No. 25. I have no intentions of becoming the Linda Lee of the Midwest, but I've come across some newsy items about our special world. Here goes:

A new book, "Hollywood Androgyny," by Rebecca Bell-Metereau (Columbia Univ. Press). It's a scholarly work that covers virtually every cross-dressing incident in the movies. And it's terrific fun to read. A must for every TV or TS library — if you can scrape up the $24.95 cover price.

A report in Chicago papers about a proposed movie about a transsexual's adventures. Its title: "Lullaby in La-La Land." Don't you love it? Can you give us an update on it?

A movie they're now showing on cable, called "The Bachelor Party." There's a cameo by Chris Morley, who does a great impersonation of a blonde bombshell. And then reveals his true sex in a truly hilarious way.

See it!

I've taken your advice to heart. Even though I'm 5'10", I've taken to wearing high heels more often. If we are to be, in your phrase, "experimentally female," let's experiment. I've already let my hair grow to my shoulders, reshaped my figure, and got a job where no one knows that the tall blonde "Karla" is a she-male. I'm going for it all.

I'm loving every minute! All you "girls," do the same!

Love always,
"Karla"

Dear Karla,

I hope that you can keep in touch with us on a regular basis. I find your way of thinking and your refusal to conform to other people's ideas inspiring.

Tell us more about yourself and your life!

Best,
Kim

Dear Kim Christy,

I have enjoyed your magazine for a number of years, and find yours absolutely the best for a TV/TS like myself.

I've always been a TV/TS since my mother wanted a girl. By the time I was 4 I had long curls down to my shoulders and wore lovely pink dresses so I was hooked at an early age. Father eventually put his foot down so I was brought up as a male, but I had lovely excursions in secret into my mother's clothes.

My aunt knew of my interests or at least suspected. When I was 11 I visited her for a week during which she invited me to play in her huge closet that was filled with beautiful lingerie, dresses and shoes. As you can imagine I was in heaven. She asked me if I'd like to play "dress up" for fun to which I could only bluster that I didn't really know how or would be ashamed. She said it could be our little secret and she would help me. Later that afternoon she returned from a shopping trip with "some things that would fit." By the end of her ministration I was decked out in a pink party frock, black patent "Mary Jane" shoes, panties, a little bra and suspender belt, my first pair of nylons and a slip. As a final touch, she made up my face and combed out my longish hair and put a pink ribbon in it. Needless to say I relished being her adoring niece for the rest of the week since she was unmarried at the time and no male to interfere.

After a number of years still unsatisfied with my male existence, I found an understanding doctor 7 years ago who started me on hormone therapy since I had been diagnosed as a Type IV

Transsexual — one who has a strong tendency and desire for female identification, but is short of a surgical recommendation. I have become much happier and better adjusted ever since. I lead a male professional life, but become a female as soon as I enter my home. Premarin has done wonders for my body and enjoyment.

Through diet and exercise I have remained relatively slender but my hips and thighs are enlarged and I can almost fill a size B cup. And, oh, the ends of my breasts feel so wonderful through their material of a white nylon chemise I'm wearing along with a nylon/spandex waist cincher I'm wearing this morning! And I just love to feel the tops of my swollen, creamy thighs now covered with long dark brown nylon stockings! What a lovely way to start a weekend morning!

I occasionally correspond with the lovely Linda Lee and find that we have a lot in common. (She's Type IV also.)

I just love your pictures in black leather costumes! (FMI #27)

Love,
Carolyn

Dear Carolyn,

Thank you for a lovely letter. The small pleasures of feeling your skin transform or of wearing a special piece of lingerie are a bonding force among all of us.

Love,
K.C.

Dear Kim,

Would you believe I worked very hard to get this to you? I sincerely hope you don't find it too lewd for your good taste. I've tried to keep this down to earth and accurate. High toned and fancy stories are nice but to me nonfiction is the most interesting. My wife and I shared together an experience or should I say many experiences, you may enjoy. At least I've got my fingers crossed on this one. I call it — "Fun in the Sun."

'I got bold and left my name and number in the 25¢ movie booths.'

I was layed off once again, not because I was a bad worker or anything, but due to cutbacks. I'd conducted myself as a lady with men for years and now had time to be myself fulltime. Let my hair grow, nails, removed all hair where needed. (A good tip you may wish to pass along is wax, "Zip Wax" works great.) It's better than electrolysis because it leaves no scars and everytime you do it the hair comes back finer. Flickers work nice too, but I only shave now if its an emergency. The hot wax works absolutely super on hands and you guessed it — that sweet opening is much more desirable to a man if prepared properly. (Don't get the wax too hot and keep an ice cube handy.) It hurts a little coming off but just tighten up, you should be good at that. When I was very young, guys often said to me "You haven't got a hair on your ass, punk." Most never knew how right they were. I'm a firm believer that cleanliness is next to Godliness and the best surprise is no surprise at all. I also believe there is nothing more femalizing than to be prepared, then allow a man to have his way with you. One of my favorites is after I've been with a man and set myself down again, is feeling the air bubbles gurgle from my opening. Its one of the after pleasures that allows it to linger on. The smooth soothing satisfied sensation makes me feel goosepimply all over. Silly Goose aye, I know.

Bookstores around our town always have an influx of such nice looking guys (a lollipop lickers heaven). I nearly cream my jeans when I'm watching them look through the magazines imagining what's going through their minds — wishing I could be her. When I fancy, and am in the mood, I'll hang out and get the motion from a guy. Trouble is, for me to be able to achieve satisfaction it takes more than we can do in five minutes or so in a dark booth. So I got bold and left my name and phone number in the movie booths of some of the nice bookstores here in our town. I wrote something like "FOR GOOD HEAD (FOXES ONLY)" or "IS THERE ANYONE HERE WHO NEEDS THEIR COCK SUCKED? TV LOVES IT, GIRLFRIEND SOMETIMES AVAILABLE FOR THREESOMES, CALL 'BABY' ANYTIME. OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS." The phone rang off the hook. We figure a few meetings a day (you go crazy if you don't, once you get started) five or six days a week keeps us more than satisfied. Around tenish is good to start seeing guys, maybe again at two or three, then again at seven or so. The phone will ring all night long so if you wish to get sleep, just take it off the hook. It's nice to be able to set a schedule but you also have to play it by ear sometimes. Its nicest when you do it from habit and the more you practice the better you get. You can make some permanent friends this way and create a small circle of friends you may know for your whole life. And since they know exactly what you enjoy, you'll find that they will be arranging get-togethers for you. Sometimes where you will be the guest of honor at a small party and find yourself with two or three nice looking guys at once. I should elaborate on how nice and sometimes not so nice guys can be when you leave yourself wide open like this, but I won't because that is the fun of it. Learning for yourself. I have discovered though that spread wide open is the way most men will prefer you. You'll get a lot of 18-22 guys calling. Experience has taught me that a man who knows and does is the best regardless. Friday nights are super and weekdays are what makes it. Week-ends I always leave for special friends. My fantasy is the same today as it was then, to please the person or persons I'm with, (a fine romance with no morals.) Paradise can happen to anyone who knows what they want. Once you know you also then know what you have to do to get it. One trick I've used is leave an alias and when he or she calls (I've also met couples this way.) you then know exactly what they wish and where they're calling from by the name they ask for, without having to ask. I guess I've developed multiple personalities from this but they're all still me. Carly Simon summed it up in one of her songs, "The Girl You Think You See" Anticipation album. I've tried to model my fem self to it ever since first hearing it.

All the time doing this sort of thing, do you wonder what I do for inspiration? Well, every chance I get I read, listen to, and view these ladies for guidance. Marilyn Monroe, when I was little I wished I could be her. The book "Confidential" by Lena Pepitone is super. Jessica Lang as Francis Farmer (identify), you've got to rent her video. I have many times. Your "Kim Christy's Image," magazine and good taste in transvestisms, best hope. Kim, you know everyone must certainly envy you. You're beautiful, delectable, but believe it or not, there are many times when I don't envy you because I know "it's tuff at the top." The intimate diary of Linda Lovelace and "Inside Linda Lovelace" are wonderful books she wrote before the overexposure became too much of a burden. Pretty baby Brooke Shields. If you've never seen her first movie "Pretty Baby" you missed something. And for your personal touch, Barbara Eden I simply adore you. I also try to work out twice a day with Charlene Prickett, she's a great exercise lady here on the health network. Try her, you'll like her. It makes positions easier to hold and get into, like a good hole should. If you want it bad enough you'll amaze yourself at what you can accomplish.

Now, let's examine the changing times. The way I see the trend for the next years to come is less sex and more involvement in fun things like cross dressing. I guess I should feel fortunate. There are very few women who've had the pleasure of being with as many men as I've already been luck enough to have been with. I plan to always keep my thingy down there because it's what makes me a special kind of woman that's much harder to come by. I hope you don't think me a mental problem from all this and I'm sorry if I've been babbling too much, but that's one of the hazards when you listen to a cunt.

Quite a few years ago the fantasy that I was fortunate enough to be able to live was not dangerous, now we've trouble in paradise. Just remember if a promiscuous person like myself can learn self control, so can anyone, but its tuff. Our health is the most important thing we have. Because of the times, I've now one male lover who likes a woman to act like a woman should. I admit to an occasional small party, but mostly though, we like to socialize.

I feel better telling you about things and I hope you don't mind what I've put down in words. I'll leave you with one of the nicest things anyone ever said to me. "Up your ass with a blade of grass," my dear. C'est la vie.

I love you once
I love you twice
I love you more than beans and rice.

Forever yours,
Baby Ricky

Baby, darling,

First of all I don't think you're a mental case. I takes all kinds of wonderful flamboyant people to make up this funny world. And you're my favorite kind of slut. The kind of girl who knows what she wants and shaves her hole to

Dear Kim:,
About five years ago when I was a senior in high school I discovered I was attracted to men as well as women. The discovery that I was bisexual came as a shock because up to that point I had been interested only in girls. But a cross-dressing experience and a brief love affair with a man revealed the true me.

One night I was studying at the public library when a handsome young man approached me and asked if he could borrow my dictionary. We got to talking and he invited me out for a coke. Afterward he gave me a ride home in his sports car. His name was Perry and he was a law student. We got to be friends and Perry invited me to play tennis with him. After several tennis dates I began to feel a strong attraction to this handsome young man but I was not able to admit it even to myself. From the way Perry talked to me and the way he treated me I could tell that he liked me in a special way. But I was just too young and inexperienced to do anything about it.

One Saturday Perry took me to the park to play tennis. There was a downpour and we both got soaked. Perry took me to his home where he lived with his mother and sister. No one was around so we stripped off our wet clothing and got into the shower together.

I won't bore you with the details but Perry and I had quite an afternoon. At one point Perry had me dress up as a girl in some of his sister's clothing. I put on panties, a garter belt, hose, heels, a slip, a bra and a dress. The clothes did not fit perfectly but they made me feel incredibly feminine. I also put on some lipstick and jewelry. Then I sat in Perry's lap and we necked and played kissy-face. By the end of the day I was a confirmed drag queen and madly in love with Perry's cock.

I began seeing Perry on a regular basis — almost every day. Usually we would just go out together as two guys but whenever possible we went to his place to play "house." I would get dressed up in his sister's clothes and make-up and pretend I was his woman. One day we went shopping together and he bought me some clothes of my own. Eventually I acquired some complete outfits including a wig. Sometimes I would get dolled up at home when no one was around and have Perry come over. We liked to go out for drives in his sports car with me in drag and stop to neck in a lovers lane area.

I was so young and naive about my love affair. I talked about getting married and told Perry I would change my sex and take hormones to grow a bust. I assumed that Perry was as much in love with me as I was with him. Imagine my shock when I read in the paper that he was engaged to be married to a beautiful young lady. When I confronted him with the article he just laughed and said he was going to get married to her because she was rich and his parents thought it was the best thing for him to do. She was the daughter of a prominent lawyer and Perry expected to join his father-in-law's firm. That was the end of our affair.

I went to college that fall with my feminine wardrobe in a trunk. There was no privacy in the dormitory so dressing up was out of the question. But, after a few months I discovered and joined the campus Gay Students Alliance and resumed my social life. The second semester I was able to move out of freshman dormitory and into a large rooming house that was populated with other gay students. Here I was free to dress as I pleased with several other she-males who lived there.

I decided to make myself as feminine as possible. I plucked my eyebrows, kept my body hair completely shaved, and let the hair on my head grow long. I got my finger and toenails manicured like a woman and had my ears pierced. I got a part-time job in the campus bookstore to earn extra money to pay for my female wardrobe and make-up. Whenever I was at the rooming house I wore feminine clothing. But on campus we had to wear male clothes or at least look like we were of the male gender. Most of the time I was wearing feminine underthings and jewelry. Of course, most of the student body was straight and the gay kids were despised and made fun of by the fraternity and sorority members. But we learned to take it in stride.

“I went to college that fall with my feminine wardrobe in a trunk.”

By the end of my freshman year I had a steady boyfriend. His name was Eddie and he was a biker type who liked to wear leathers and high heeled boots. I would get dressed up in a girl biker's outfit sometimes and ride around behind him. We had a lot of fun together but he left school the following year and I lost track of him.

My next conquest was an English Professor who was married and in the closet as far as his being gay was concerned. I met him at a party for gay people. I was in drag — completely dressed from head to toe in the sort of outfit a college coed might wear. His name was Arnold and he was very intelligent and witty. He treated me as though I were really a lady. I was very coy with him at first and refused to date him. But he kept sending me mush notes, flowers, and little gifts. Finally I told him I would go out with him. I got myself dolled up, packed an overnight bag, and made him drive us to a motel fifty miles from the campus. He checked us in as a man and wife and we spent the night there. Arnold turned out to be a submissive queen type so I assumed the dominant female role and made him my sissyboy slave. The next day I took him shopping and bought him a dog collar and cuffs along with a leather bondage outfit. For two years Arnold came to me periodically for weekend sessions. Then he got another teaching position and left our campus.

During my junior year I was able to obtain female hormone shots and pills from a medical student and began to develop breasts and feminine skin and hair distribution. I wanted to live fulltime as a woman but there was no way I could. I already looked so feminine that wearing male clothes was a problem but conditions at our university just did not allow me to go fulltime. One thing about being so feminine and yet still retaining enough masculinity — I was equally attractive to men and women. I had many one night stands with lesbian women and a few straight girls as well.

In the spring of my junior year I went to a fancy drag ball dressed in an evening gown with all the accessories. I made Arnold go as my escort wearing his dog collar, a tux, and an earring.

I am in graduate school now at another university. I have my own apartment and live fulltime as a she-male woman. Life is full of lovers and excitement. But, I still think back to that afternoon with Perry. Somehow there's no time like the first time.

A SOFT MALE MANIFESTO

by Allynn Verano

Dear Kim,

What is it about dressing as a woman that is so addicting, so deeply satisfying to those of us who indulge? Hard to say, and it probably differs for each of us, depending on our backgrounds and our needs.

But a common denominator must surely be that by seeing our softer side, we achieve an inner peace — a sense of completeness — that the constant drone of male existence can never offer. For me, as I apply eyeliner or do my nails, even as my hands shake from excitement, I feel a sense of quiet contentment, a sense of balance restored. Ah . . . home again.

Interestingly, I always feel like ME, as man or as woman. The same

ME is inside. Just as I'm me whether expressing myself on the baseball diamond or at the piano, I'm me in pants and I'm me in a skirt.

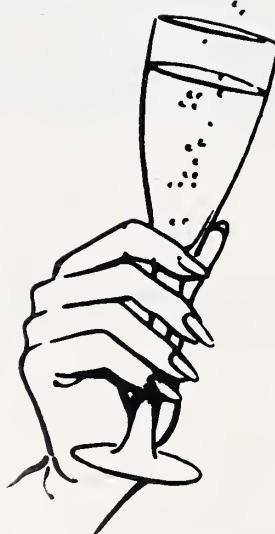

My wife is out of town for a week, so I've had the opportunity for longer, more intense sessions. She knows about my transvestite activities, but, far from approving, she considers this to be one of the tragedies of HER life. Ah, if she could be a bit more open, what pleasure we could enjoy together. Maybe with time! Hope springs eternal!

I was delighted to find your wonderful magazine! It wasn't real easy to approach the counter with it (there in that greasy adult bookstore), but what the heck . . . have courage! The importance of communication among ourselves cannot be underestimated. There are so many of us living in a silent closet of secret pleasures but emotional confusion. I believe that we must be the vanguard for a revolution in the male role. Why must we IMPERSONATE a woman? Why can't we simply be FREE to be you and me! In other words, don't box me into being MACHO MAN or a FAG, just let me be me . . . lipstick and all!

I've enclosed a Manifesto that I would be delighted to have you share with your readers.

Much love,
Allynn Verano

“Can a man, without fear of ostracism and social stigma, be too pretty?”

The liberation of women is an ongoing and healthy process. Centuries of culturally imposed sex role stereotypes are being smashed as women reach out in numerous directions to say "I can," and "I will." While much work remains to be done to bring women onto an equal footing with men, nevertheless the frontiers have been crossed. We now have a woman Supreme Court justice, women in the Cabinet, in Congress, and in just about every other area of endeavor in which they have cared to participate.

Women have fought and won a war of liberation in our society. But what of men? The assumption has always been that men — having enjoyed a "superior" status in society — were already free. Women were fighting to achieve the rights, privileges and opportunities that already existed for men. But how true is this? Are men "free," or do men simply enjoy a particular set of sociocultural opportunities that women coveted and had been denied? And — with the exception of a few symbolic gestures like refusing to have doors held open for them — didn't women demand and attain the privileges of men IN ADDITION TO THE RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND OPPORTUNITIES that women traditionally enjoyed? Isn't it true that a woman now has tremendous flexibility in defining herself as an individual? Isn't it equally true that men remain locked in rigid roles with far more limited opportunities for self-expression?

If all this strikes you as ludicrous, let me phrase the question this way: If women can be bodybuilders, can men be pretty? Can a man, without fear of ostracism and social stigma, try to be pretty? Can he highlight his eyes with mascara, soften his lips with lipstick, shave his legs and wear high heels to show off their beauty? Not to imitate a woman, but as a personal interpretation and expression of masculinity?

Of course, at present, any such man would invite scorn and ridicule. Now perhaps you are asking "Why would any man want to do this?" Well, the answer is that many wouldn't. Some would. The real question is "Why isn't it possible?" Why should men, in a liberated society, enjoy less opportunities than women?

Women are allowed to realize and express yin and yang, aggressive-passive, within one being — in whatever degree those qualities naturally and harmoniously appear within each individual. Men, however, must conform to stricter guidelines of behavior. Oh sure, women's liberation advocates have always encouraged men to express their softer, feminine side. But often this seemed more like a ploy to get us to do more housework, rather than a genuine effort to see the softer side. After all, if there's a noise in the house during the night, who's going to check it out? And if that noise just happens to be the mouse-trap, who's going to clean it out in the morning?

So, the thesis of this essay is that women have achieved (or are in the process of achieving) the best of both worlds — the opportunity for a full range of self-expression, while men are stuck. Why?

Let's take the issue of Dress for example. Women can wear virtually anything, from an only slightly feminized business suit, to Jockey briefs, to a sweaty old pair of "Cons." But let a man appear in a sweater with just the faintest trace of a puffed sleeve, or a V-neck that drops a bit too low, and what's the immediate reaction? "THE GUY MUST BE A FAG."

Men live in fear of this. Conform — in dress, in speech, in style, in attitude, in behavior — or people are going to start whispering. "Oh, Joe, I think he's a little, you know . . ." Men live in fear of this.

This masculinity thing is such a heavy that we practice from early youth to master its forms and thereby insulate ourselves from any chance of anyone doing any whispering about us. We live sports — preferably huntin' and fishin' — and can while away the hours discussing the merits of various automobiles, football teams, or beers. But hey, we don't go to the opera (voluntarily), discuss the children (except for their athletic achievements), or be seen perusing Cosmopolitan while waiting on the supermarket checkout line (no matter how enticing that article about "What Women Want in Bed" may look). Because Cosmopolitan is a women's magazine, and real men DON'T READ WOMEN'S MAGAZINES. And it's very important to us that no one — even that unknown matron behind us on the checkout line — not look at us with an eye that says "Why's he reading Cosmopolitan — is he a queer?"

It is this fear, certainly unconscious in those men who have best mastered the game — more conscious in others — that underlies so much of contemporary male behav-

I AM BLACK TS — fair-skinned — very heavy into being a female. I would love to correspond and meet with others who enjoy this deep feminine glow as I do. I don't shock easily and I have a very active imagination. My hobbies are poetry, music, chess and cooking just to name a few. I am an easy going and submissive lady with the right person and would do most anything to be treated like a lady, loved like a woman. I need the right person to make a real woman out of me and take away the loneliness that I feel when I long to be with someone. I need to share some hours with someone when I become so "Regina," that I become hysterically feminine and have to go into sweet anal masturbation, in front of a large mirror. Pure bliss. I need to share those moments with someone and I am looking forward to answering all who write. Photo not a must but it would be appreciated. Please send SASE. Hurry, Regina awaits you, no matter what race, creed or color. F-413

BLK MALE. I've never experienced a relationship with a TV. I deeply desire correspondence and meeting with a TV in N.C. & S.C. areas with a nice plump ass and tits.

SENSUAL BI/BLACK/TV, 30's, loves heels, corsets, dildos, erotic attire and parties. Seeks big throbbing cum-filled cocks for my tight cum-draining asshole. Send SASE, photo. Explicit letter for response. F-415

NEW YORK-BASED EXECUTIVE and former Mama's boy was raised to be a big sissy. Now I dress up as a lady whenever possible. Love to correspond and meet with other TV ladies and their wives or girlfriends for dressing up occasions and going out. Like trading clothes for an evening with a girl my size (16). Enjoy being 'bossed' by aggressive liberated women who want to keep a man in skirts and high heels. Will play secretary to executive female or nurse to woman doctor. Also enjoy being the lady's maid. Not gay. Hetero TVs and female only. Travel possible. Send photo. See photo. F-416

IV Confessions

He wasn't naked, but he had discarded the marabou negligee and nightgown for the panties and the brassiere he now wore and stood behind his bar looking to the empty martini pitcher. There was a certain amount of wooziness in his head; he had put down too many of the martinis, more than he usually did before a job. But this should be a snap. It had been all set up for him. But that was another bit which troubled him. He liked to set everything up for himself. But there had to be something different, something he didn't understand which made his contacts demand the orders be carried out exactly the way they wanted it. And since the cash on the line had been heavier than usual, he agreed to all their stipulations . . . the place, the time and the hit.

To hell with it. He mixed half a pitcher of martinis and quickly filled his glass again. It should be easy! There should be no problems. It was cold! There would be few, if any, people on the streets at that time of the morning. He could get in real close.

The one thing he never got used to were their eyes at the moment his victims realized what was about to happen to them. All the eyes didn't always have the same reaction. Some, the tears well up. Others go wide in surprise or shock. Some squint or even close, many of the eye closers grimaced as if this would guard against some expected pain. Looking death straight in the face is never a pleasant experience for anyone. But it is the eyes which react to any given situation . . .

He was eighteen and he had taken over his sister's room when she left home, after getting married. It was much larger than the one he had and it had its own bathroom, along with the further pleasure, the closet had a lock. Shirley had insisted on that for one reason or another, perhaps to keep him from getting at her wardrobe when she wasn't around, even though she never denied him access to them when he asked her . . . she realized his desires sometime after the cousin happening . . . they'd had a long talk about it and she seemed to understand his predicament . . . she kept his secret . . . she never even brought the subject up to him again, after that one informative talk. When he wanted some of her clothes he designed what he wanted and she secreted the things to him . . . there was no need of explanations . . . and when at times he was able to capture some garment he wanted; either he was able to buy them, got them from some girl, or stole them, or however he got them, Shirley kept them in her closet with her things. At night, when the house was quiet, whatever he wanted, was sneaked into his room; to be sneaked back the same way before the house became busy again.

Shirley had left most of her younger clothes in a closet in his room when she left home. He had taken what he wanted from the many boxes in the closet and locked them in his private wardrobe. He was eighteen and commanded his own privacy. His mother still cleaned the room and made up the beds but never said anything about the locked closet, she never had even during Shirley's day. And there always was a knock on the door before anyone entered his private domain . . . it was a courtesy, not a "must."

THE knock came just as he was letting a nylon slip fall down over nylon panties and brassiere. "Are you busy, son?" It was his father. "Just a minute, dad!" He didn't take the things off. He had a long robe in the closet for just such emergencies. He tied it securely around his middle, then unlocked the door. "I never could understand you or your sister, always locking your door." The man laughed and he closed the door behind him. Chris had already moved to sit on the edge of his bed across the room.

"Got something important on your mind, Dad?" He knew there was, otherwise there would have been a living room meeting at some other time. But the question formed in his mind because his mind was on fire in the fantasy of the clothes behind the locked closet door which he wanted to get into, then face his full-length mirror to do what he had to do; do what he wanted to do; get the releases which had built up in him all day while he was out looking for some kind of a job.

Henry, his father, crossed to sit on the edge of the bed with Chris. "Find a job, Son?"

"Not yet! But I'm looking." He didn't try for a bored tone, but that's the way the words apparently came out.

"Ohh, now, I didn't mean anything by that." And his hand moved to pat Chris on the knee, and his robe started to open. Chris quickly pulled it back into place. A quarter of an inch in the garment's parting would have revealed the lace of the slip he had on. "You know your mother and I aren't hurting for money. Fact-of-the-matter is you might say we're well off even with today's prices. We never have said for you to get a job unless you want to."

"I know, Dad. If I sound a little off, forget it. You and mom are the greatest. I've got something on my mind, that's all."

"The nylon panty hose slipped excitingly over his legs."

"I've felt that for sometime now." Henry got up and paced the floor a few times before he spoke again. "Chris! Have you ever thought about going to college. You know I've had that in mind for both you and your sister ever since you both were very young. But your sister is gone now and that means your mother and I could afford a little more for you."

"I haven't given much thought to that." He wasn't tremendously excited about the prospects. He'd always felt like an outcast in grade school and high school, because he didn't fit in with the society of those situations, and he didn't know what to expect in college; just another school. He'd never come in contact with any college people who could inform him about the happenings in college. "I'll give it some thought." The words were just as unimaginative.

His father again sat on the edge of the bed. "Before you even think about going, you've got to give a lot of thought as to what you want to do with the rest of your life, then comes the college thing. When you find out what you want to do, then you find out the college which is the best to give you what you need. See what I mean?"

"I think so." Chris felt the stinging sensations of neglect stemming in the ass side of his balls. He wished his father would get the meeting over with. He had to damn well soon get his hand around his dick. "But for a while, I want to get a job. I'm bored, dad. I got to be doing something."

His father lowered his eyes in almost an embarrassed attitude for what he was about to advise. "Well, Chris. I don't know all the things you younger generation feel about the way our world is being conducted. But," he spoke more slowly, "maybe if you'd cut your hair and not have those long pointed fingernails." He put up his hand lightly to stop Chris from speaking.

"Oh, I know, I know, it seems to be all the rage. I see it, but most of them look like bums. You never look like a bum, you don't even wear those crummy levis like most of them do. You are always well dressed." Chris couldn't help but think about the panties, brassiere and the chemise he always wore under that immaculate suit, the shirt and the tie, or the panty hose hidden by knee-high men's socks. "And Chris you don't talk in that crazy jargon of the streets."

"Let's change the subject, Dad."

"Oh! sure! It was just a thought. You do with it what you want. You're eighteen and old enough to make your own way, the way you want to. I can't interfere any longer, and I don't want to. I just want to slip to you some of the things I've learned over the years, and it has been a lot of years. If I can help, I'll always be right here."

"I know that, Dad!"

"Tell me. What kind of a job are you looking for?"

"I'd like to say, anything I can get . . . and I guess I did start out with those thoughts, but cleaning up the floors in some joint or pushing sodas over a fountain, selling ties in a department store, that's for the birds . . . I've gone to a lot of offices."

"Office work, huh?"

"I'm good with a typewriter. I took shorthand in school and I guess I'm pretty good at that too." He folded his hands over his knees and the lace of the slip under the robe rubbed his knees. The sensations in his sacs started again. "Maybe I'd like to be a secretary."

The older man blinked, but spoke good naturally. "Maybe your hair and fingernails aren't that important afterall." Then he laughed. "I think you should think about college." He stood up, but made no move to leave the room.

"Like I said, Dad, I'll give it some thought."

"You won't have to worry about a thing in college. Even if something happens to me you wouldn't have to worry about a thing."

"You're going to live a long time, Pop."

"No one hopes that more than me," laughed Henry. "But a secretary, Chris!"

"It's a thought."

"Talk to your mother about it. She's been a secretary for years."

"How well I know."

"See how tired she gets now that she's older. And another thing. It took her years to get a raise. Of course, she doesn't have to work any longer, but she doesn't want to quit."

"I know her feeling. Why sit around the house all day, which is just my point. It's a bore."

"That's not my point. They don't pay secretaries very much, and all the secretaries are girls. I don't know of any men secretaries, only girls." He might of, at that moment, meant it as a joke, but the older man said, "Your sister left some of her clothes behind. Put them on and maybe you'd get a job as a secretary."

Henry laughed at what he thought was his joke; a pun at his son. Chris wasn't laughing, and out of the corner of his eye, he glanced toward the locked closet and wondered what his father would think if he knew that most of the good things Shirley had left behind were in there.

"Well, anyway Chris, think over what I've been telling you and we'll talk again."

"Sure, sure . . . "

Henry started for the door, opened it, and paused to turn in the open doorway. "You haven't called me pop in years. Sort of brings back times when you were a kid."

Chris feigned a grin. "I'll do it

"The heels clicking on the cement was music to her ears."

more often."

"You do that, Son . . . maybe it'll take some of the grey hairs out of my head." He went out and closed the door behind him, and Chris crossed quickly to lock it, but he tripped on a throwrug and went down. He hit his knee a stinging blow. It wasn't cut, but he knew by the next day there would be a nasty bruise. He rubbed it for a few moments until his eyes caught sight of the beautiful nylon slip and the lace fringe which was exposed when his robe fell open down the front. The sight brought on the stinging in his balls which was more powerful than the stinging in his knee.

He got up, took up the key from a cigarette case in the desk which had been added to the room when he had taken over two years before, when he was still in school. Quickly, he stripped off the robe and threw it to the bed, then he crossed to the closet and unlocked it.

He decided upon streetwear, the thought came to him when he father had talked about secretaries, and only girls being secretaries, and his own thoughts that he should be wearing the attire he wanted as he attempted searching for that kind of a job . . . any kind of girl job . . . even a waitress.

The nylon pantyhose slipped excitingly over his legs, and his legs immediately took the shape of a girl's. Again he went to the closet and selected a light green skirt with a white blouse that had extremely frilly cuffs and the same amount of frills down the front. He topped it with a green cardigan sweater which matched the skirt. He pulled the frilly cuffs out through the cuffs of the sweater and adjusted the front edges of the sweater so that the frills and ruffles of the front would be prominent. He slipped into green high heeled shoes, then went into the bathroom and took a long time in making up his face to the necessary perfection . . . satisfied, he went back to the closet and took out a long blonde wig which he felt would match the green of his outfit. The blonde wig was one of three, the others being auburn and a black one, all very long hair.

His mirror told him the illusion was perfect . . . except one thing . . . in his haste he had forgotten to adjust the falsies into the brassiere. He got them from the dresser, unbuttoned the blouse a couple of buttons and stuffed the rubber orbs into the brassiere, then adjusted the blouse and sweater again.

Satisfied with herself, Chris floated around the room for more than half an hour, and all the time his cock was getting harder and harder in the panties, but the restrictions of the tight nylon kept it from showing at the front of the skirt. The high-heels felt good on her feet . . . She was walking down the main street of the two and the sound of the heels clicking on the cement was music to her ears. And when the wind circled under her skirt to cool the crotch of her panties, she knew her cunt would stay dormant until she felt it was the right time to bring it to life.

All eyes were on the beautiful girl with her blonde hair waving in the slight breeze, swinging from side to side with every step. And there was just the right sway to her hips in the tight green skirt. That ass was the envy of all men, Chris knew that, and she permitted a bright smile to cross her features as she knew what the men were thinking, and she knew that there were those sensations flowing through their groin . . . she knew that to be fact, because they were flowing right through the crotch of her panties . . . there wasn't a one she passed who would ior and exerts a rigidifying effect on male expression. Can it change?

While male role definitions have remained remarkably stable over the past few centuries — since the advent of the Industrial Revolution — its forms may change. Here's an example: A guy who would rather die than wear long fingernails may sport a haircut that twenty years ago would have been considered scandalously feminine. The Beatles dared convention and opened a new era of freedom in the way men wear their hair.

The key seems to be that to adopt any form that carries the connotation of feminine behavior, men must be able to incorporate that behavior into their male repertoire. And it must appear simultaneously in enough men that it acquires a certain social acceptability as a male practice. The makeup of Boy George, David Bowie and others hasn't been adequately effective in opening up the use of cosmetics to "the man on the street." Make-up and an androgynous appearance seem confined to rock stars for the present.

Strangely enough, long hair, makeup, and feminine attire on a man seem to be very attractive to women. Why else would the "Heavy Metal" groups choose to come on that way? Why would Prince be such a phenomenon? And why would "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" starring a most alluring transvestite, be the movie sensation of the last ten years? These guys are sexy, and women appreciate them!

Can men be pretty? Sure we can, and some of us will, as we push against the walls of a tyrannous pseudo-masculinity. Males are pretty in glorious decoration — just witness the beautiful creatures of the animal world, where it is the males who are the colorful, the adorned, the sexy. Men are pretty in their glorious decoration — just witness the gentlemen of Europe in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries (the time of Louis the XIV). And men will be beautiful again, for freedom is an inexorable force, and some of us will expose ourselves to scorn and ridicule if it allows us the freedom of full self-expression. As a father, a husband, and a heterosexual, I want that freedom for myself and for future generations of men. Women have achieved their freedom, and now we must fight for ours! Pass the lipstick.

TV Confession

not like to have laid up with her, to run their hands over her entire body, and to nuzzle at the mound beneath her panties. She knew that their tongues would go wild in her mouth, and she would do the same for them. They would swap spits as they had never swapped spits before, because she had talent in that direction. Their tongues would circle and slap and smash over each other's into the passionate excitement of the moment, and their hands would always be on the move, searching out whatever secrets each held. They would run their hands through her long blonde hair, and they might even kiss it. She knew that they would insert the tip of their tongues into her ear, and make hickys all over her neck . . . she'd have to make those little red marks disappear before she went home again . . . she couldn't let her mother and father see them . . . it might give the whole game away . . . and then she was having too much fun being out there in the world, dressed the way she was, to have any part of the game taken away from her.

But the cool air which had been breezing up her skirt and cooling the front of her panties was swiftly diminishing. Her cunt heats were a searing flame of torture which had to be expunged . . . to be put out before it destroyed her entire insides. She had to have her cunt violated. She needed the cock of a man to accomplish that feat.

The reflection in the mirror watched Chris glide across the bedroom, lift the skirt and pull his steel-hard cock out into the open. It was with great and serious ceremony as he wrapped his fingers around the shaft and began to slowly pull it back and forth . . . his hand grew swifter in the movement as his body heat rose and the fantasies, the illusions, of having a cock buried deep into his cunt raced through his mind.

"My son . . . the secretary," said his father, in disgust, from the doorway.

Chris saw his father standing in the doorway behind him, but for the moment it didn't register in his clouded brain what had happened. The realization didn't register at all. He continued jerking off, and by this time his hand was moving furiously over the sex instrument. Then the moment of climax came, and he moaned in ecstasy as the cum squirted out of the head of his cock and flowed over the mirror, as it always had before. But it would take some time before he got around to cleaning it off after this session.

Then as the effects of his pleasure subsided, the realization of what had happened dawned on him in one great horror. When he tripped over the rug, he had forgotten all about locking the door, and his father was standing behind him, and his father had seen everything . . . right through to his climax.

Chris drank down the martini and poured another. He would never forget his father's eyes at that moment. And perhaps it was one of the main reasons that the eyes of his victims had been so important to him. He always searched them, as if trying to see beyond them into their very brain, as he did that night when he was eighteen, and he searched his father's eyes, because his father had never spoken another word to him till the day he died.
